

JUST REMEMBER
15c a World "Wants"
LINE
Mondays and Saturdays 10c a Line.
NO EXTRA CHARGE ON SUNDAY.

The Evening World.

A GREAT CHANCE
IS OFFERED TO ALL
SECURE A SITUATION
Through World "Wants."
5c a
LINE
NO EXTRA CHARGE ON SUNDAY.

PRICE ONE CENT.

NEW YORK, WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 13, 1892.

PRICE ONE CENT.

LAST EDITION. ROUNDED UP.

Eleven More Outlaws Indicted and Under Arrest.

The Same Course to Be Taken with Other Dive-Keepers.

Proper Results Produced by "The Evening World's" Crusade.

Excise Exchange Davis Asks for Fair Play and Gets It.

Supt. Murray Declares that Outlaws Shall Never Regain a Foot- ing in this City.

NEW YORK'S OUTLAWS.

[A Table Subject to Daily Change.]

BILLY McTODDY, in the Penitentiary.	JOHN GOLD, Under Arrest.
JOHN KELLY, Under Arrest.	CAREY WELCH, Under Arrest.
THOMAS McCOLEMAN, Under Arrest.	DANIEL SCRIBNER, Under Arrest.
ALFRED GIBSON, Under Arrest.	J. H. McTODDY, Under Arrest.
PAUL McARTHUR, Under Arrest.	A. McALEER, Under Arrest.
LEWIS WATERS, Under Arrest.	JAMES LYNCH, Under Arrest.
CHARLES SMITH, Under Arrest.	FRANK STEVENSON, Under Arrest.
MANAGER DAVIS, Under Arrest.	JIM SULLIVAN, Under Arrest.
LOUIS STAJER, Under Arrest.	IGNAZ BUTNER, Under Arrest.

The outlaws are going.
As a direct result of THE EVENING WORLD'S crusade in behalf of law and order eleven of the dive-keepers were yesterday returned by the Grand Jury were arrested last night. Bail was refused for them and they spent the night in station-house cells.

REKLY AND GOLD PAID IN A CELL.
"Honest" John Kelly and "Tom" Gould were assigned to the same apartment, and Lynch and McCormick likewise doubled up.
How they passed the night they declined to say this morning. The officers at the station-house said they did not know what sort of a time their star lodgers had, but imagined that it must have been rather a dismal one.
At the Fifth street and Eldridge street stations the dive-keepers were accommodated with separate cells. In no case did they give any trouble after they were locked up, and although many of their cronies called to see them during the evening they were not permitted to go into the lock-up, so the prisoners were not disturbed.

THE DISTRICT-ATTORNEY'S OFFICE.
Early this morning they were taken out of the cells and brought down to the District-Attorney's office, escorted by the captains and three or four policemen from each predict.
It was a solemn and melancholy looking group that gathered in the outer room of Mr.
Stoddard's office shortly after 10 o'clock this morning. Those of the dive-keepers who knew each other collected in knots and discussed the situation with anxious faces.
Representatives from the office of Howe & Hummel and other law firms were on hand and advised with their clients in whispers.

LOOKED DREADFUL AT REPORTERS.
A group of newspaper reporters was eyed by the prisoners with looks of malignant hatred.
"Gould looked particularly ferocious," and gave an extra hard twist to his big yellow mustache as he glared around the room.
He was the best dressed man in the crowd and wore a handsome new beaver overcoat and the shiniest of silk hats, while diamonds glistened in his shirt front and on his fingers.
He was pouring the story of his troubles into the ear of Louis Allen, of Howe & Hummel's office.

ELEVEN OUTLAWS INDICTED.

After a Night in Jail they Gave Bail for Trial.

Eleven more of New York's most notorious outlaws indicted by the Grand Jury and placed behind prison bars.
That is the further result of THE EVENING World's crusade against the dens of outlawry which for so long a time have been defying the law and violating public decency.
The indictments, as THE EVENING WORLD announced last night, were found by the Grand Jury at its session yesterday. As soon as they were transmitted to the court bench warrants were issued, and late in the afternoon most of the offenders against whom they had been issued had been gathered in by the police of the precincts in which the digs were located.

HOW THE ARRESTS WERE MADE.
In the "Tenderloin" precinct Capt. Kelly went out himself with Detectives Hayes and Leson. The captain himself arrested "Tom" Gould at his home.

The others arrested in the "Tenderloin" were Dan Scrivener, the proprietor of "The Pickwick" at 147 Broadway; Frank McCormick, whose infamous resort is at 259 Sixth avenue; "Honest" John Kelly, of 250 Sixth avenue, and James Lynch, who keeps a distinctly respectable home character at 245 Fourth avenue.

Capt. McLaughlin, over in the Fourteenth precinct, had almost as much work to do.
His warrants called for the arrest of Carey Welch, the keeper of the "Hole in the Wall" at 117 Fourth avenue; Paul McCarthy, whose den is at 327 Bowery; Andrew Mc-Allee, of 209 Bowery, and Lewis Walters, of 283 Bowery.

All these resorts are in the same neighborhood. The captain himself arrested Carey Welch and Detectives Hisselt and Hagen the others.

Acting Capt. Creedon, of the Eldridge street station, corroborated John McCarthy, who is the proprietor of the vi-den at 253 Bowery, and Charles Smith, whose place is at 107 Bowery.

ALL LOCKED UP FOR THE NIGHT.

All the prisoners were taken to the respective station-houses as soon as they were arrested.

CAREY WELCH.

There was no end of cursing among the arrested dive-keepers, and maledictions were heaped upon THE EVENING WORLD for the part it had played in bringing them into the clutches of the law.

Several friends of Gould, Kelly and McCormick followed them to the station, thinking that they might be able to save them from imprisonment by offering bail. It was of no use. The police could not take bail in such arrests, and there was no alternative.

It was after 5 o'clock in the afternoon and too late for any of the indicted men to obtain aid from legal advisers.

The Judges of the general Sessions had made their appearance up to noon.
They were all attending the funeral of Chief Clerk Sparks, and the prisoners grew restless at the long delay.

Gould and Welch got out under escort.
Gould and Carey Welch went out in company with the officers in whose charge they were. The others remained in the waiting-rooms and talked matters over with their friends.

The general sentiment seemed to be that it was a cold day for the dive business. It was learned that none of the arrested men had yet secured legal counsel, except "Tom" Gould, John Kelly and Tom McCormick.

Capt. Kelly and McLaughlin were on hand waiting to see what disposition would be made of the cases.

JAMES LYNCH.

They said that they had no difficulty in arresting these men, and that in one or two cases, when the indicted men had found that the police were looking for them, they came and gave themselves up.

BAILED IN $1,000 EACH.
Judge Martine did not arrive at the Courthouse until nearly 1 o'clock. He was then believe as was the case with the others.

"The exposure of 'The Slide' and the Excise Exchange was a revelation to me. I remember that when I was an Inspector I prosecuted a man named Roselle for keeping a similar place, but it was nothing near as bad.
It seems to me that the dens have grown steadily worse in character, and that they had about reached the lowest depths of infamy."

"I shall watch particularly the dissolute and depraved creatures who have helped to make 'The Slide' and the Excise Exchange notorious. Whenever they congregate hereafter I shall see to it that the place is broken up and that they are punished."

Being informed that the reporter had visited the dens in his professional capacity, the Superintendent became deeply interested and asked many questions regarding the people who visit them, their proprietors and the damage they do to the city.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages, but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has given me more satisfaction than the closing of the dives. The new year could not have been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

THE PICKWICK FORCED TO CLOSE.

Even Bowery Dive-Keepers Thought It Wise to Shut Up Early.

Morals are undergoing a forced change for the better in the precincts of the dens managed by New York's outlaws.
Mr. Dan Scrivener closed his Pickwick to all comers last night, and Mr. August Gul-don, French king of the Bowery street, was not open for "business." Even the bars which served as an excuse for the existence of these dens were closed last night, and no drinks were sold over the counters. The two places were dark and deserted.

Probably no two men could be selected to represent the depravity of metropolitan outlawry than Scrivener and Guldon.
Scrivener represents the aristocratic extreme.
His den is on the city's great thoroughfare, Broadway, near Thirty-sixth street, where gentlemen looking for amusement only are by crooks who wear the outward seeming of gentlemen and who pretend to get their victim intoxicated and to relieve them of their valuables in as gentle a manner as is possible.

Guldon keeps a dive whose patrons reek with vice and debauchery in its unglorified and unvarnished form. In his den the victim need not be given money or well-dressed, so long as he has money.

SOMETHING IN A NAME.
Scrivener's den is called the "Pickwick," Guldon's "The French Hotel" and the "Black and Tan." The names, as well as the proprietors, show the difference in the character of the places. One is a "high-toned joint," the other a "low dive," but who can say which exerts the most harmful influence in the community?

For the first time since THE EVENING World's crusade was begun, Sunday night excepted, Scrivener last night locked every door to his den and shut up entirely.

Dan himself was gathered in by one of Capt. Kelly's policemen early in the evening, but he had plenty of company in the ten other outlaws, whose arrest at the request of the Grand Jury is detailed elsewhere.

Three lone females crawled in out of the dripping wet into the Pickwick doorways and sat down. All three were new to the place.
Guldon had already had one night in a cell and didn't care for another, so he, too, kept his bar and dive securely closed.

"Honest" John Kelly locked and darkened his designation-room last night, as also did Mr. McCormick, and the others. The dive-keepers were locked out of the place, and the dive-keepers were locked out of the place, and the dive-keepers were locked out of the place.

John McCormick and George Charles Smith, were locked out of the place, and the dive-keepers were locked out of the place, and the dive-keepers were locked out of the place.

Lewis Walters made a deposit of $1,000 in cash and was given his liberty.
Paul McCarthy's bondsmen was Adolph Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

In the case of Andrew McAlister, Judge Martine was not satisfied with the bondsmen, and the prisoner was remanded to the custody of Capt. McCormick until he could procure a suitable bondsmen.

McAlister's bondsmen was Adolph
Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

McAlister's bondsmen was Adolph
Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

McAlister's bondsmen was Adolph
Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

McAlister's bondsmen was Adolph
Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

McAlister's bondsmen was Adolph
Kessinger, of 155 Park Row, and Carey
Welch, of 283 Bowery, of this same place.

den were as vile and infamous as they were described in THE EVENING WORLD. And right here I wish to state that THE EVENING World is entitled to the credit for calling public attention to these obnoxious places.

My attention was called to them through THE EVENING WORLD. I found its accounts of them in the main accurate, and I stated to the representatives of all the New York newspapers.

JOHN KELLY.

"The exposure of 'The Slide' and the Excise Exchange was a revelation to me. I remember that when I was an Inspector I prosecuted a man named Roselle for keeping a similar place, but it was nothing near as bad.
It seems to me that the dens have grown
steadily worse in character, and that they had about reached the lowest depths of infamy."

"I shall watch particularly the dissolute and depraved creatures who have helped to make 'The Slide' and the Excise Exchange
notorious. Whenever they congregate hereafter I shall see to it that the place is broken up and that they are punished."

Being informed that the reporter had
visited the dens in his professional capacity,
the Superintendent became deeply interested
and asked many questions regarding the people who visit them, their proprietors and
the damage they do to the city.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

The Superintendent announced that hereafter he would hold his inspectors personally responsible for the good behavior of the dive-keepers. Inspectors Williams, Steers and Conlin were present when this was said.

In his many years of service he had come in contact with vice and crime in all its stages,
but in all his experience the gray-haired Superintendent said he had never heard of
more shocking depravity.

At the conclusion of the reporter's recital
he said: "Nothing that has been done in years in the way of suppressing vice and crime has
given me more satisfaction than the closing
of the dives. The new year could not have
been begun better."

up to 1 o'clock this morning, when he, too, shut up shop.

There were other outlaws of lesser degree on the Bowery who did business last night in a subdued way.

John S. Smith, John H. McLaughlin, Louis Waters, Andrew McAlister and Paul McCarthy, whose respective dens are at 107, 253, 285, 290 and 327 Bowery, were all gathered in by the police last night. After the arrests business fairly rushed out of their establishments, and in most of them closed early.

There were a few women in McLaughlin's back room, but at 11 o'clock the only person in the place when an EYEWITNESS World investigator called was the bartender, who sat on a beer leg and relieved his feelings in swear words.
In language more forcible than elegant he expressed the sentiment of all New York's outlaws and their terror at THE EVENING World's crusade.

"THE EVENING WORLD" — "It's he roared. "It's driving everybody out of the business."

John Wulfer's place, at 72 University place, was open for a bar business only, and not a woman was allowed in the place.

DANIEL SCRIVENER.

"We're a little better just at present," whitepered the bartender to a crowd, nodding towards the back room, which was dark and deserted. Outside on the walk, shivering in the biting rain, three creatures of caprice acquired pedestrians. The night for them was even harder than for the divekeepers.

FRANK STEVENSON'S "SLIDE" CLEARED OUT.
Frank Stevenson's "slide" at 107 Bowery street was closed tight and dark as usual last night, and the assignment annex of his saloon at West Third and Thompson streets was tightly locked.

The rain did Mr. Stevenson a good turn in washing the unremoved snow from "The Slide" steps last night, but it left a big pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide have been removed, and that the interior is now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, was also closed tight as it has been since selling his slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

An EYEWITNESS World reporter learned this
morning that all the tables, chairs, bar-
fixtures and other furnishings of the Slide
have been removed, and that the interior is
now as bare as an empty barn.

This shows plainly that words that
Stevenson's slide is a thing of the past.
Mr. Tom Gould's basement den at Sixth
avenue and Twenty-third street, was also
closed tight as it has been since selling his
slide. Stevenson's slide was closed tight, and
nothing for the police found, but it left a big
pool of dirty water in front of the door that bore equally strong testimony that "The Slide" was closed for good.

CRAZY OR DRUNKEN? FEARS FOR THE DUKE.

Policeman Coleman Ran Amuck on Forty-seventh Street.

Knocked Down a Little Girl and a Small Boy.

Lays It All to Quinine, but Was Held in Police Court.

Thomas Coleman, a tall policeman attached to the West Thirty-seventh street station, was a prisoner before Justice Piver in the Jefferson Market Court this morning on two charges of assault.

Coleman has been on the force almost four years. He was transferred to Capt. Cross's command six months ago from the Sixteenth precinct. For the past four days he has been on the sick list, but he was to have reported at his station-house for duty this morning.

He left his home at 438 West Forty-seventh street early last evening, and an hour or so later was attracting a crowd about him on Broadway by his screams and wild gesticulations. Those who saw him declare that he was very drunk.